

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An applicator for applying a cosmetic product includes a support comprised of plastic material and at least one bundle of bristles associated with the support. In some examples, the bundle may include an end portion defining a first row of bristles extending substantially in a longitudinal direction of the support, and the bundle may being split into at least two sub-bundles extending away from the end portion. The at least two-sub bundles may define second and third rows of bristles extending at least in part outside of the support.